

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for opening potassium channels in mammalian cells by administering to a mammal effective amounts of potassium channel-opening keto compounds as described herein.